The Seymour Tribune reports that Trinity volleyball has been ranked number one by the IHSVCA, and they are very excited at the possibility of going to state. And, the team is very capable of getting there. And not only that, but Ruthie Bingham was recently nominated for best hit of the week by the streaming service through which Trinity volleyball receives highlights of their games. This year, there are three seniors: Ruthie Bingham, Stella Kleffman, and Kamzi Gross. After going to state once, they are ready to go again. “I want to get to state. And I don’t just want to get there, I want to win it,” Ruthie said.

But, it’s going to be a lot of work. “Practices are fun but also very tough, we do everything as a team and work on a lot of skills and fundamentals,” Kamzi said. Not only that, but they are going to have to beat a lot of really good teams in order to get to state. Practices often last several hours, and they have multiple games throughout the week. But, this is no different from past seasons. It’s all a part of the game.

While volleyball is a lot of work, it can be very fun as the team bonds throughout the season. “When we first came in over the summer, it was awkward. No one talked. At the Barr Reeve tournament, we were in the locker room and they had to tell us to calm down because we were talking so much. Everyone is so close. Even the seniors are close with the freshmen, which is something that doesn’t happen very often. You build relationships with people, even in travel volleyball, that you never imagined that you would have,” Stella said.

This volleyball season will have its ups and downs, and if the team gets to state that’s great. But no matter what happens, the team will always be there for each other for the wins and the losses.
